Description:

In this groundbreaking book, leading psychologists take an unauthorized look at the most elaborate hoaxes, cons, and scams in history. From the Ponzi scheme to the Madoff investment scandal, these experts dissect the psychology behind these elaborate deceptions and offer insights into how to protect yourself from becoming a victim.

The book is divided into three parts. The first part, "The Psychology of Hoaxes," explores the psychological motivations of hoaxers and the factors that make people susceptible to being fooled. The second part, "Case Studies of Elaborate Hoaxes," examines some of the most famous hoaxes in history, including the Loch Ness Monster, the Piltdown Man, and the Cottingley Fairies. The third part, "Protecting Yourself from Hoaxes," offers practical advice on how to spot a hoax and avoid becoming a victim.

This book is a fascinating and informative look at the psychology of hoaxes and scams. It is a must-read for anyone who wants to understand how these deceptions work and how to protect themselves from becoming a victim.
